VSU DOCTORAL COMMITTEE MEMBERSHIPS & VSU DISSERTATION SUPPORT GROUP

Asked to lead face-to-face dissertation support group (“Dissertation Dive-in”) by Interim Dean of the Graduate School. Group meets every other Wednesday evening and evaluates writing by group members. Initially started with 9 dissertation students, now 6 are actively participating. I maintain contact with each of them at least once a week, offering support and encouragement; I send reminder about the meetings; and I provide private comments to each student, usually within 5 hours of receiving their work. In addition I lead the group and provide a means of communication with the Graduate School when they have questions about formatting, style, etc., of their dissertation. Done Fall 2014-Fall 2015.

ORIGINAL EDUCATIONAL VIDEOS CREATED AND PRODUCED

Rule of Thumb: Interviews of three women, two of whom have left their batterer and one who has not. Video discusses cultural messages about domestic violence and the cycle of violence theory. Idea came from discussions one night in my "Women as Body" special topics course. Used in Intro. Soc., Soc. of Gender, and Social Psychology courses. Over 2000 students have seen tape in classes.

Packaged to Perfection: Interviews six college women about their presentation of self ("look", makeup, shoes, clothes, weight, beauty strengths and weaknesses) as well as cultural and economic messages that socialize women into buying products to enhance and transform themselves. With Dr. Chet Ballard and Laurie Swift. Used in Soc. of Deviance and Soc. of Gender courses. Over 5000 students have seen the tape in classes.

RESEARCH IN PROGRESS

Research being conducted on the topic of "nurses who kill." Using data collected from newspapers, documentaries, and court records, my research will find patterns in these incidents, in order to help the health care industry better screen its employees and protect patients. Interestingly, nearly 50% of such nurses are males. That is significant, given the low percent of men in nursing. I hope to use this data in at least one theoretical article on how troubling conditions are not constructed as social problems as well as use the data on nurses for another article.

Collaborative research with Dr. Kimberly Tanner, VSU Director of the Access Office for Students with Disabilities about changing the campus climate concerning persons with disabilities, how accommodations are made in classes, etc. Partially funded by Department of Education national grant. A part of this research involves co-creating and teaching a course, PERS 2699: Disability in Film, in first an online and then face-to-face learning environment and writing about the pedagogical and technological hurdles faced in online delivery of course content to students with disabilities.
