PROFESSOR BHAER: Tell me, what is it you are writing here? Violence and seduction on every page? Blood and guts stuff? What you think the world wants to hear? If I have noticed nothing else about you, Miss March, I have noticed you are unique. Something you should try not to forget. I think you could do better. Miss March, since you have been here – six weeks now, is it? – you shout, you rant, you upset the whole order of this boarding house. I am a serene and peaceful man. I spoke my mind, as you spoke yours. Obviously, it was not appreciated on either side.
